Child abuse and neglect is a widespread problem in our society. In the United States alone, more than 700,000 children are reported to be abused or neglected each year. That's one child every 45 seconds.

The consequences of child abuse and neglect are devastating. Children who are abused or neglected are more likely to experience physical, emotional, and developmental problems. They are more likely to drop out of school, become involved in crime, and suffer from mental illness. They are also more likely to experience poverty and homelessness as adults.

The good news is that child abuse and neglect is preventable. We know what works to keep children safe and healthy. We need to invest in these programs and policies, and we need to work together to create a society where all children can thrive.

Society's Betrayal of the Child is a powerful and thought-provoking book that explores the devastating impact of child abuse and neglect. Filled with real-life stories, research, and expert insights, this book is a must-read for anyone who cares about the well-being of children.

In this book, you will learn about:

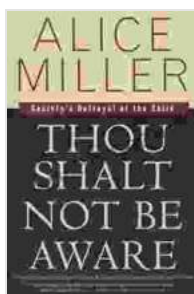

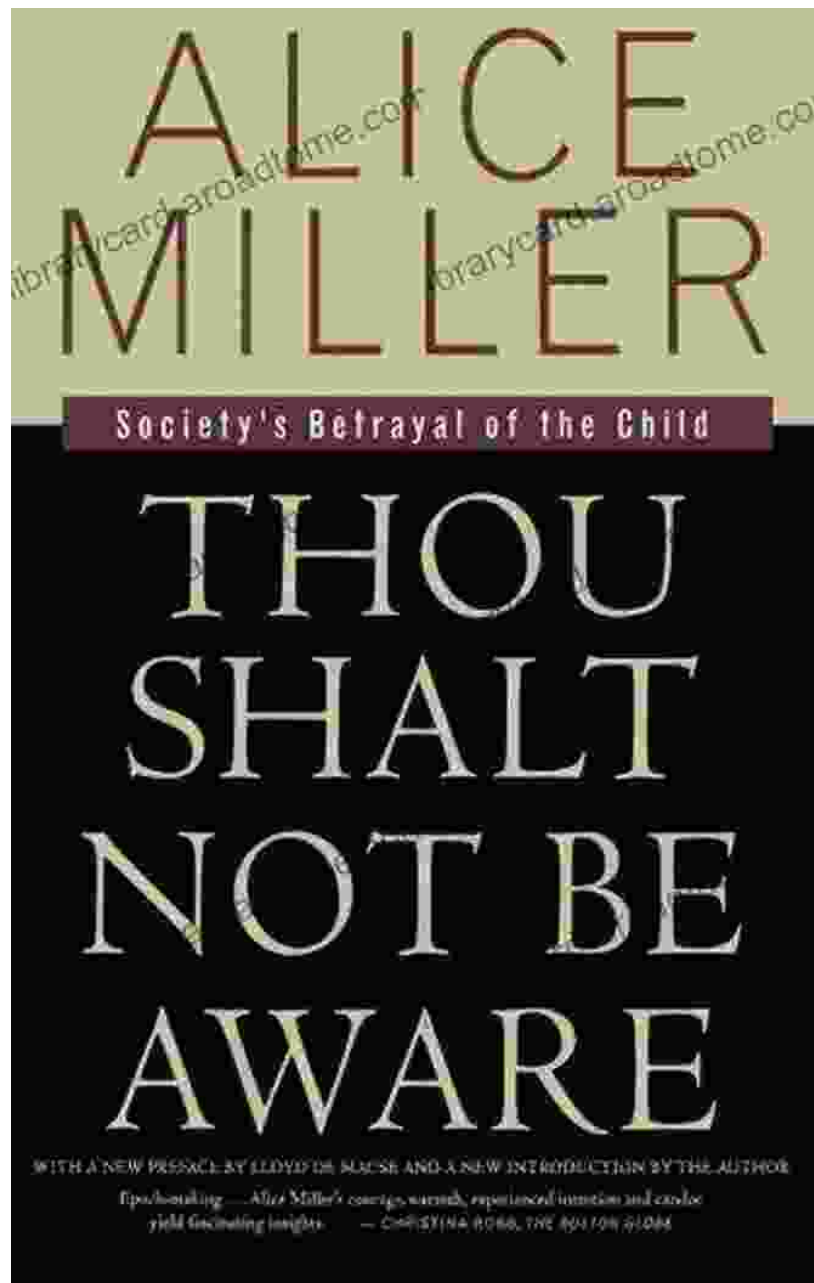

- The different types of child abuse and neglect
- The warning signs of child abuse and neglect
- The impact of child abuse and neglect on children
- What can be done to prevent child abuse and neglect
- How to help children who have been abused or neglected

Society's Betrayal of the Child is a wake-up call for our society. It is time for us to stop turning a blind eye to the suffering of our children. It is time for us to take action to create a society where all children can thrive.

If you are concerned about a child who may be being abused or neglected, please reach out for help. You can call the National Child Abuse Hotline at 1-800-4-A-CHILD (1-800-422-4453) or visit their website at www.childhelp.org.

Together, we can make a difference in the lives of children.
